Culture capsule: Owning a house is difficult both in the USA and in Costa Rica; however, there are several differences concerning housing. In Costa Rica, most houses are built using concrete. In the USA, most houses are built with wood or brick and the roofs are not made with zinc plates. Most houses in the USA have a heating system for the winter and a cooling system for the summer, and they usually have a cellar and an attic. Also, most houses have wall-to-wall carpeting.
